

The Institute of Art History and Archaeology of Europe at the Faculty of Philosophy I of the Martin-Luther-University Halle-Wittenberg has a

W2 Professorship Medieval and Postmedieval Archaeology

to be filled as soon as possible. Prospective candidates need to demonstrate experience in teaching and research in the field of Medieval and Postmedieval Archaeology and should be able to represent the subject as a whole, with Medieval and Postmedieval Archaeology of Central Germany in particular. Applicants should be willing to engage in interdisciplinary cooperation, especially in the context of the Network „Cultural Heritage” and aligned research activities on the Middle Ages and Postmedieval Era of the Martin-Luther-University as well as with the State Office of Historic Monuments and Archaeology in Halle. Particular importance is given to the readiness to collaborate in the Master Course “Heritage Management” and at the Graduate School IMPRS “Anthropology, Archaeology and History of Eurasia”.

We are looking for a dynamic teacher and researcher with proven expertise in her/his field of research. In addition to a PhD in Medieval and/or Postmedieval Archaeology, prospective candidates should have earned a habilitation or demonstrate equivalent scientific achievements and relevant externally-funded research activities (excavation and/or other projects). We expect a leading personality with good teaching skills and a high level of social competence. Prerequisite for applications from abroad is the willingness to learn German as a teaching language. Applicants must fulfill the recruitment requirements of § 35 of the HSG LSA.

The Martin-Luther-University is an equal opportunities employer. It is committed to raising the proportion of women in academic positions and therefore particularly encourages qualified women to apply. The Martin-Luther-University Halle-Wittenberg offers good opportunities to combine professional work and family obligations. Disabled applicants will be given preference if equally qualified.

Salary will be determined according to the legal and budgetary regulations.

Applications should include a CV, a list of publications, certificates, an overview of scientific career, teaching and research activities so far and a sketch of current and planned research projects. A summary application form is available at: <http://www.philfak1.uni-halle.de/berufungsverfahren>. Applications, indicating both current private address and office address, should be sent within six weeks after the publication of this advertisement to:
